DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

1. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

2. Claims 19, 7, 12, 17 and 18 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weston et al, of record, in view of Horne et al, cited herewith. Weston et al disclose a currency handling apparatus including a housing 2, cash stores 22, 24, 26 and a cash box 21; the apparatus is switchable to a float mode in which the serviceman replenishes the coin store, see col. 5, lines 36-40. Weston et al does not disclose a means to control the operation of the machine by a person that does not have access to the internal components of the machine.

Horne et al discloses a currency handling machine with a modem that provides two-way communication with a remote computer 110 that can control operations of the currency handling machine. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in view of the showing and teaching of Horne et al to provide the currency handling machine of Weston et al with a modem and connection to a remote computer to allow control of the currency handling machine by a person that does not have access to the internal components of the machine.

3. Claims 2 and 3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weston et al in view of Horne et al as applied to claim 19 above in further view of British publication 2187021.

Weston et al, as modified by Horne et al, show a cash handling machine with all the features of the applicant's claimed invention except altering the operation of the machine upon receipt of a token. The British publication discloses a coin handling machine that alters its operation upon receipt of a token, see page 3, lines 83-98. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in view of the showing and teaching of the British publication to provide the device of Weston et al with means to receive a token and means to alter the operation of the machine in response to receipt of the token. Merely calling for particular features to be activated by the receipt of the token would involve only an obvious matter of design choice to one of ordinary skill in the art.

4. Claims 4 and 5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weston et al in view of Horne et al as applied to claim 19 above in further view of Schuller et al. Weston et al, as modified by Horne et al, show a cash handling machine with all the features of the applicant's claimed invention except the keypad. Schuller et al disclose a cash handling machine that includes keypad 25 for controlling the operation of the machine. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in view of the showing and teaching of Schuller et al to provide the device of Weston et al with a keypad to control the operation of the machine.

5. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weston et al in view of Horne et al as applied to claim 19 above in further view of Schuller et al. Weston et al, as modified by Horne et al, show a cash handling machine with all the features of the applicant's claimed invention except the display of the coin levels in the coin store. Schuller et al disclose a display 29 that displays the amount of coins in the coin stores; see col. 48, lines 8-36. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in view of the showing and teaching of Schuller et al to provide the device of Weston et al with a display to show the coin levels in the coin stores.

6. Claims 14 and 15 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Weston et al in view of Horne et al as applied to claim 19 above in further view of Hochriem. Weston et al, as modified by Horne et al, show a cash handling machine with all the features of the applicant's claimed invention except the lockable door for the cash box. Hochriem shows a cash handling machine with a first cash store 7, 8 and 9 and a second cash store 48 including a lockable door 50 that allows access to the second cash store but not the first cash store, see page 3, lines 59-67. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art in view of the showing and teaching of Hochriem to provide the device of Weston et al with a lockable door for the cash box that would allow access to the cash box 21 but not the coin tubes 22, 24 and 26.

Specification

7. The disclosure is objected to because of the following informalities: it does not include a Brief Description of the Several Views of the Drawing(s).

Appropriate correction is required.

Oath/Declaration

8. Receipt is acknowledged of the Declaration filed 03 October 2003.

Allowable Subject Matter

9. Claim 16 is objected to as being dependent upon a rejected base claim, but would be allowable if rewritten in independent form including all of the limitations of the base claim and any intervening claims.

Response to Arguments

10. The applicant's remarks have been considered but have not been found persuasive in view of the new grounds of rejection.
